Enrile says court erred on tax refund for Lucio Tan

MANILA, April 4 — Sen. Juan Ponce Enrile said today that the Supreme Court's decision to grant a tax refund to Lucio Tan was a "mistake" and that the government should not be bound by it.

Enrile, who is a member of the Senate Committee on Finance, said that the court's decision was "a very bad precedent" and that it would "open the door" for other taxpayers to demand similar refunds.

He said that the government should not be "forced" to pay the refund and that it should instead "stand firm" on its position.

RESEARCH

[illegible][illegible]

There used to be a lot of people who were afraid of the word "cancer," says Dr. H. J. Schaefer, M.D., of the University of California, San Diego. "But now, because of the advances in our knowledge of the disease, we can say that it is not a death sentence," he says. "It is a disease that can be treated, and it can be prevented." — Dr. H. J. Schaefer, M.D., University of California, San Diego.

the 1990s, the number of people who have been infected with HIV has increased significantly. In 1990, there were about 1 million people living with HIV in the United States. By 2000, that number had risen to about 4 million. And in 2008, it was estimated that there were about 12 million people living with HIV in the United States. This is a dramatic increase, and it is a reflection of the fact that HIV is a highly contagious virus that can be spread in a number of ways, including through sexual contact, sharing needles, and from mother to child during childbirth. The good news is that there are now treatments available that can help people living with HIV to live longer, healthier lives. But the bad news is that there is still no cure for HIV, and the virus can still be passed on to others. So it is important to continue to work on finding a cure for HIV, and to continue to educate people about how to prevent the virus from spreading.
